

UNTIL LIGHT COMES

When night falls and eats the countryside
When gloom comes and swallows all things

All she looks for
Is a good place to sleep
What she longs for
Is dreaming her only dream

She sleeps in stones
When he's away
She sleeps in stones
When she's alone
She sleeps in stones
When he's away
She sleeps in stones

Until light comes
To warm her up
Once more

All she looks for
Is a good place to sleep
What she longs for
Is dreaming her only dream

She sleeps in stones
When he's away
She sleeps in stones
When she's alone
She sleeps in stones
When he's away
She sleeps in stones

THE COAST

There is a coast surrounded by reefs
Swept across by the beam of a lighthouse
There is a coast surrounded by reefs
And on an unpredictable sea sails a boat.
And here we are turn by turn
For ourselves and each other
The coast, the reefs, the lighthouse and the boat

A RESONANCE OF MYSELF

If I were made of water
You would be the first barrier
Built across my way
To withstand my wildest forces

If I were made of earth
You would be the constant gardener
On my soil made fertile
You'd grow millions of shoots

As they would rise up to the sky
The wind would play among them
And weave the softest veil

And if your bones should turn into glass
And your skin become fragile as silk
I would soften the world
I'd raise padded walls around us

So you wouldn't break if you fell
Wouldn't feel any pain
Wouldn't fear anything

This how strong my love is, how much I care

IN THE HALF-LIGHT

Did I upset you with my strange behaviour
Did I freak you out with my weird sense of humour
I thought you could be the kind of guy
Who would deal with this easily
But don't get me wrong
All I wished for was to

See you smile once again in the half-light
See this shining smile
Once again, just one night

Sorry for my insistance,
But all of a sudden I felt so impatient
You, very innocently,
Plucked some of the tender strings in me
Pardon me for denying her existence
It was unfair and rude
Still I meant only good
And all I wished for was to
See you smile once again in the half-light
See this shining smile
One again, just one night

I'd like to see you smile
Just one night

See you smile once again in the half-light
See this shining smile
See you smile once again in the half-light
See this shining smile

RELEASE IT

What is it you fear ?
You who were so volunteer
Has time eroded your confidence
Or is it the shadow of a stronger hand on your hand

It's never been about the possibility of pain
Now you know it's your independence at stake remember the good little soldier
Call him back, the campaign is not over yet

Allow it to happen
Release your hold

Now take your heavy clothes off and run out naked one more
Meet the wildest wind
And let it scratch your skin

Allow it to happen

And give

Allow it to happen

Release it...
